The New Engineering Educators (NEE) Division of ASEE invites abstracts and workshops on topics of interest to new engineering faculty, mentors, and administrators of new engineering faculty. This includes contributions from seasoned and new educators alike on topics that include, but are not limited to:

- aspects of managing classroom and research-group activities
- pedagogy for the new engineering faculty
- advice on writing technical papers
- advice on developing and organizing research ideas in proposals
- seeking and obtaining funding
- tenure dossier preparation or other tenure and promotion issues
- work-life balance and time management
- career planning and dual-career issues
- new faculty development/mentoring

Those interested in proposing workshops on topics related to faculty development or other topics of interest to NEE should contact the Program Chair directly, no later than October 1, 2012.

Authors should submit an abstract of 250-500 words through ASEE’s Monolith system. See http://www.asee.org/conferences-and-events/conferences/annual-conference/2013/program-schedule/2013_Authors_Kit.pdf for more details. All ASEE divisions are publish to present; authors of accepted abstracts must submit a full paper for review and acceptance in order to be included in the NEE program at the conference and in the conference proceedings. Panels must also submit and abstract and may submit a full paper. Additionally, papers accepted for publication and presentation in the NEE program are eligible for the following NEE Division Awards: Best Paper, Best Poster, and Promising New Engineering Educator Awards. The authors of papers selected for one of the above awards are expected to become members of the NEE Division.
