ASEE Members Elected to National Academy of Engineering

February 7, 2014

Eight members of the American Society for Engineering Education (ASEE) were elected to the prestigious National Academy of Engineering (NAE) on February 6. Those members are:

Katherine Banks – vice chancellor, dean of engineering, and Harold J. Haynes Dean's Chair Professor, Texas A&M University.

Thomas Flynn Edgar – George T. and Gladys H. Abell Endowed Chair in Engineering, department of chemical engineering, University of Texas, Austin.

Ned Mohan – Oscar A. Schott Professor of Power Electronics and Systems, department of electrical and computer engineering, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis.

George M. Pharr IV – Chancellor's Professor and McKamey Professor of Engineering, department of materials science and engineering, University of Tennessee, Knoxville.

Craig Philip – chief executive officer, Ingram Barge Co., Nashville, Tenn.

Bob E. Schutz – Joe J. King Chair in Engineering and FSX Professorship in Space Applications and Exploration, University of Texas, Austin.

Jery R. Stedinger – professor, School of Civil and Environmental Engineering, Cornell University.

Ian A. Waitz – dean of engineering and Jerome C. Hunsaker Professor of Aeronautics and Astronautics, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

According the NAE website:

Election to the National Academy of Engineering is among the highest professional distinctions accorded to an engineer. Academy membership honors those who have made outstanding contributions to "engineering research, practice, or education, including, where appropriate, significant contributions to the engineering literature," and to the "pioneering of new and developing fields of technology, making major advancements in traditional fields of engineering, or developing/implementing innovative approaches to engineering education."

For more information contact:
Nathan Kahl
n.kahl@asee.org