DISAPPOINTED WITH THE PICNIC IN MONTREAL LAST YEAR?

Then you will love the picnic planned in Nashville this year. Join friends and colleagues for a true country and western shindig at the Wildhorse Saloon, which is conveniently located within walking distance of the convention center. This year's picnic will include more food and fun, and more networking opportunities than ever before. You can sample down home country barbecue one minute, and try line dancing the next. Tickets purchased before June 13 are only $35.

As a fitting finale to your trip to Nashville, you'll want to attend the 2003 ASEE Annual Awards Banquet and help recognize the Society's National Award winners and the Best Paper award winners. Tickets are available at $65 per ticket until June 13.

The 2003 ASEE Annual Conference will bring together engineering educators from across the U.S. as well as abroad. This year's meeting will feature 270 technical sessions with close to 1300 published papers, over 100 exhibiting companies, and the opportunity to be involved in the world's largest gathering of engineering educators. Please visit our website at www.asee.org/conferences/annual2003.

PRISM WINS MORE AWARDS

We've learned that Prism was a finalist in the Ed Press competition for the best cover, "The ABC's of Engineering", November, 2002. Two Prism stories made the final cut in the prestigious Iris Molotsky Award for excellence in coverage of higher education, which is sponsored by the American Association of University Professors. The stories were "Facing the Problem," October 2002; and "A Contrarian for the Ages," December 2002.

NEW STUDENT CHAPTERS

ASEE is pleased to announce the addition of four new student chapters at Austin Community College, Iowa State University, Northern Illinois University and The University of South Carolina. Student chapters encourage interest in engineering education and develop relations in the community through K-12 outreach activities.

PROFILES DIRECTORY READY TO MAIL

The 2002 edition of the Profiles of Engineering and Engineering Technology Colleges will be mailed before Memorial Day. Much of this information is already available online at: <http://www.asee.org/colleges>. This year's publication includes more longitudinal data and trend analysis. Please contact Michael Gibbons with any data questions or needs at m.gibbons@asee.org.

LEARNON GETS MORE VISITORS

Learnon.org, ASEE's continuing education site, received 11,000 visitors in April, a significant increase from the previous high of 8,000 visitors following the Globalspec partnership. Learnon was also mentioned in the current issue of IEEE Spectrum magazine in the article titled "Online Education Expands and Evolves," which can be seen online at: <http://www.spectrum.ieee.org/careers/careerstemplate.jsp?ArticleId=e050103>.

ANNUAL REPORTS

ASEE Board members, committee chairs, and representatives to other organizations are expected to file an Annual Report with headquarters. This is a requirement dictated by the ASEE Constitution. Reports can be simple, and need only cover the following: name of council/office; meetings of the unit you represent; and any significant actions or major events of your unit. Other information could include future activities and any suggestions you might want to make. Annual Reports received by May 15th will be attached to the June agenda for the ASEE Board of Directors meeting. All reports that are received in timely fashion will be collated and filed in a permanent archive at ASEE headquarters.

APRIL CONNECTIONS

See:
The April issue of ASEE's new e-newsletter, Connections. This newsletter is free to engineering educators across the nation and is primarily directed to non members of ASEE. By providing current information about engineering education, we hope to stimulate interest in ASEE and inform a large audience (approximately 20,000) of the latest in engineering news.
